

Merry Christmas!

High Power

This year (Jan. 2nd to Jan. 30th) we've expanded our annual "Garand League" to a "Military Service Rifle League". The change will allow shooters to compete with any issued military type rifle from any era providing the following; 6mm caliber or larger, original configuration with iron sights (no scopes or red-dots). Examples: M1 Garand, M1 Carbine, M1A, '03 Springfield, 03-A3, Mauser & AK types to list a few. The course of fire will be 100 rounds over a 5 week period (20 per week) from a standing position using the standard 100 yard small-bore target. The fee for the league is $15 and shooting will be from 9am to 12 noon.

Youth Pheasant hunt another big success!!

Once again our club held its annual Youth Pheasant hunt at the Meadow View Game farm in Salem New Jersey on Sunday, November 7th. A special thanks goes out to Mary and John Batt, Bob Arnot, Tom Hennessey, Tom Ochuida and all of the their helpers that came out to help guide the kids in the fields, most of them also bringing their bird dogs to help flush the birds. The day was a complete success with a great turnout of kids, beautiful weather and some good food and refreshments. The staffs at Meadow View are great people. They provided us with some great birds and were very helpful with our group. They offer good prices and it's easy to get to. You can contact them at 1-856-935-8077.

David L. Grove, 31, a Pennsylvania wild life conservation officer, was patrolling late Thursday when he heard shots and noticed a pickup truck on the side of a two-lane road just south of Gettysburg. A spotlight streamed from the truck onto a field. To Grove, that meant one thing: illegal hunting. What unfolded in the next few moments, police said, was unlike anything that has happened in Pennsylvania for nearly a century. Grove ordered the driver from the truck and tried to handcuff him, authorities said. The driver, a convicted felon, pulled a gun and opened fire. The officer shot back. When the firefight ended, Grove lay dead with a bullet in the head, reportedly the first wildlife conservation officer killed in the line of duty since 1915. His wounded assailant sped off into the night. On Friday, officials charged Christopher L. Johnson, 27, of Fairfield, Pa., with Grove's murder, after finding him at a nearby camp. Adams County District Attorney Shawn Wagner said he would consider seeking the death penalty for Johnson. The killing stunned the small, close knit group of wildlife conservation officers - "the thin green line" they call themselves - and rippled elsewhere, particularly as hunting season looms. Gov. Rendell ordered state flags flown at half-staff. "Totally senseless" was how State Police Commissioner Frank E. Pawlowski described the killing. Pawlowski said Grove's death highlighted how dangerous the unheralded job of a wildlife officer can be - a job increasingly devoted to catching poachers on state and private game lands. Often, that means patrolling desolate spots during dark hours. In most cases, Pawlowski said, a wildlife officer is "dealing with individuals who are armed." "It was not an unfamiliar scenario for Grove, a boyish-looking officer who had been associated with the Game Commission for nine years. He understood the dangers and routinely wore a bulletproof vest, Pawlowski said. Grove attended Appalachian Bible College in West Virginia and earned a bachelor's degree in wildlife science from Pennsylvania State University. In 2001, he became a deputy conservation officer, a volunteer post, in Franklin County. Two years ago, he was one of 21 cadets commissioned full-time officers after a year of training. Their work includes protecting wildlife and promoting conservation. They have guns, badges, and arrest powers, which they employ increasingly in a state with nearly a million licensed hunters - not to mention those who flout the law. Pennsylvania bans hunting at night and out of season. The two-week rifle season for deer hunting doesn't begin till later this month. Still, the state averages about 930 prosecutions for big-game poaching a year, according to the Game Commission. A new law stiffens the penalties for poaching. Grove had written a story for this month's Pennsylvania Game News, the agency magazine. Titled "A Shot in the Dark," it recounted a night he and a deputy applicant spent chasing a pair of poachers. As we drove to our spot for the evening," he wrote, "I explained to him that while we typically put a lot of hours in at night, there is not always action. Still, he wrote, every year since he had signed on as a deputy in 2001, he had been involved in at least one chase. Assigned to cover Adams County after graduation, Grove lived in the same town, Fairfield, as Johnson, the man accused of killing him. But authorities said there was nothing to suggest they knew each other. Johnson had served at least two stints in prison. In 2002, he pleaded guilty to burglary and theft. Three years later, he was jailed again after pleading guilty to child endangerment and other charges. He and a friend, Ryan Laumann of Fairfield, set out Thursday around 6 p.m. for a night of hunting, Laumann later told police, according to a detective's affidavit filed in the case. Hours later, they found themselves on Schriver Road, a dark two-lane stretch dotted with cornfields, older farmsteads and newer homes in Freedom Township, just south of Gettysburg National Military Park. The men carried a spotlight and a .22-caliber rifle – to first stun, then kill their prey. It was only minutes after they'd shot a deer that the game officer pulled up behind their truck, his emergency lights flashing. Grove radioed for backup and gave the dispatcher the truck license plate number, according to the affidavit. Then he got out of his vehicle and approached the truck. Sitting in the pickup, Johnson turned to his passenger. He told Laumann that he had a .45-caliber pistol on him and "he wasn't going back to prison, Laumann later told police, the affidavit said. Johnson then got out. Laumann told police Grove tried to handcuff Johnson and the two men began scuffling. According to the affidavit, Johnson fired at least three times at the officer, then ran to the truck, crying out, "I've been hit!" Laumann said he and Johnson drove off together but later split up. Police worked the case through the night. They traced the truck to Johnson - and his relatives led them to Laumann, who promptly agreed to cooperate. He told them Johnson was headed for a hunters' camp in nearby Franklin Township. Officers found him there Friday morning, and he surrendered peacefully, they said. Then he started talking. He told police he had abandoned the pickup and a passing motorist noticed his wound and offered him a ride. When officers arrested him, they asked Johnson whether he realized he'd shot a police officer. "No," he replied, according to the affidavit, "I thought it was a game warden." Johnson was treated at a York hospital and was expected to be held without bail. Officials did not say whether Grove had a family. They described him as an avid hunter, fisherman, and golfer and a standout officer. "It's a sad and dark day for the Game Commission," said Robert Criswell, the commission's south-central regional director and a friend of Grove's. "When we take the oath and get our commission, we know this is a possibility. But we've been fortunate since 1915.

There will be shirts for sale at the club that are commemorate Officer Grove. These shirts are being sold for the Pa. Game Commission. Not sure about the price at the time of printing. Please show your support for an officer who put his life on the line.

A New Season Of Airgun Competition To Begin In April

By Ed DeRienze

With the past year's successful record of Airgun competition behind us we are looking forward to next year's scheduled matches at the club's Air Rifle range.

With many new members joining the club; and we see them arriving almost every week-end to look at what our club offers for its members. At the combined Air Rifle and Air Pistol range, located at the top of the hill, we have an excellent set-up for whatever type of airgun shooting that either a novice or expert, whether youngster or adult, to enjoy as they would like.

This is an open invitation to all new members as well as those that have been in the club for a few years, to try shooting an air gun. If there are some who do not own either an air pistol or an air rifle, we do have a few that can be loaned for either men, women or youngsters to try. There is no charge for that however, if one should want to enter one of the air matches there is a modest registration fee except for Junior members, under the age of 16 are permitted to enter the contest free of charge.

ALL MATCHES IN STANDING POSITION

The Air Rifle and Air Pistol range set up for either type of practice shooting, metallic silhouettes or paper targets. Only soft lead pellets may be used at the metal targets and stands.

Many shooters may remember their childhood shooting adventures and using a much loved "BB Gun" and the many times they heard their parents tell them, "You will shoot your eye out!" It is still a painful thing to hear and also to have a steel round ball bounce back at hit you or someone else standing by. It is for that reason, for the safety of all members at the club's ranges that we must insist that steel BB's only be shot at soft cardboard or the Styrofoam slab shown on the right side of the range.

There are many other rules of safety that are applied to shooting at all of the club's ranges. These rules are usually posted at a prominent spot at each range. There is also a booklet containing the safety rules for each range that is provided to each new member, family or individual. All members are urged to read and observe all of the rules of safety and conduct at the Delaware County Field and Stream Association.
